Homes by three prominent Valley architects are now on the market, each showcasing the extraordinary talent and vision that went into their making. Still highly sought-after, their designs are architectural classics. —Nancy Erdmann

Kendle's Modernism

BIO Architect Brent Kendle's passion for crafting sustainable environments that reflect their surroundings has been his defining characteristic. Focusing his work solely on regional modernism, he thrives on the details, as well as connecting deeply with his clients to create timeless architecture.

THE HOUSE Kendle describes this home as "clean, modern minimalism-meets-Southwest resort-style living" with its sophisticated detailing and materials chosen for their indigenous qualities. Located on 2 scenic acres in Paradise Valley, the redesigned house features a chef's kitchen, wine room, theater/game lounge, stainless steel and glass suspended staircase, six-car garage, detached guesthouse, exercise studio and a saltwater pool.

DETAILS $10.49 million, Paradise Valley, Kirsten Johnson, 602.370.0561, and Denise Pruitt, 480.390.3350, Arizona Best Real Estate, pruittandjohnson.com

Bruder's Angles

BIO Phoenix-based architect Will Bruder has been making a name for himself internationally for more than 40 years with his award-winning designs. His use of natural materials and careful siting of projects in reference to the sun demonstrate his mastery of organic architecture in the desert Southwest.

THE HOUSE Situated on 5 saguaro-studded acres in a gated community, this extraordinary home, with its dramatic geometry, angled masonry walls, floating steel roof and amazing use of light, is a showpiece in the desert and one of Bruder's most recognized projects. Built in 1998, the 3,200-square-foot house was recently renovated to bring it up to date, yet also reflect the architect's original intent.

DETAILS $1.64 million, 8915 E. Jack Neville Drive, Scottsdale; Scott Jarson, azarchitecture/Jarson & Jarson Real Estate, 480.425.9300, azarchitecture.com

Tull's Adobe

BIO The late architectural designer and artist Bill Tull will forever be remembered for his designs incorporating pueblo, Moorish and territorial influences. A painter at heart, his adobe homes built in the 1980s and '90s are still considered works of art, and many are being lovingly restored.

THE HOUSE This custom adobe home in the Boulders enclave of Adobes de la Tierra sits on a lot offering exceptional views of Black Mountain. With its iconic Tull elements—flagstone floors, saguaro-ribbed shutters, beamed ceilings and exposed adobe walls—it is a masterpiece of its genre. A courtyard entrance off the 2,922-square-foot house offers access to a charming guest suite. All furnishings are included in the sale.

DETAILS $1.4 million, 7850 E. El Sendero, Scottsdale; Irma Kuhweide, Russ Lyon Sotheby's International Realty, 602.579.7955, irmakuhweide.com
